Introduction to the conference

We have been witnessing significant changes in higher education teaching and learning over the past two decades. The shift towards digital teaching & learning, video learning, e-learning, massive open online learning as well as individualized courses is taking place very fast. This phase of transition has been influenced by social, political, economic, technological and legal developments that are taking place in the society. The re-engineering of the teaching and learning framework is under way in the progressive universities worldwide. Paradigm shift happening today necessarily impacts the library services as they form the most important support services.

Our libraries are required to focus on accelerating technology, innovation, technical complexities, wireless access, production and multimedia software and workstations for users. Librarians are expected to change their roles as Knowledge Resource Managers for community, promoters of e-learning, researchers and developers of open source tools and enablers of digital education. Therefore, the library professionals have to act in a proactive manner to align with the changing academic paradigm.

Theme

The following are the conference themes and these are suggestive, but not exhaustive:
